

Abstract

A transferable liquid crystal laminate comprises at least a releasable substrate, a protective layer and a cholesteric liquid crystal layer, characterized in that the protective layer side of the releasable substrate has been subjected to an easily separable adhesive treatment. The transferable liquid crystal laminate is excellent in separability and the appearance of a transferred portion after being transferred and is reduced in the formation of burrs, resulting in the decrease of yield.